Captain Corey's Curiosity Corner

SODA OR SUNDAE?

The soda jerker is now definitely part of our American way of life. You watch him prepare a banana split or a cherry sundae. And it really takes technique to make a strawberry ice cream soda with the right hand, a plain pineapple soda with the left hand, and keep both eyes on the malted milk machine. At the same time the soda jerker is discussing the latest sport events in town.

When boys and girls get together, sodas and ice cream always are a treat. How would you like to have a soda bar in your home? Here are a few simple suggestions to help you prepare drinks for the group the next time you meet, have a club affair, a birthday party, a social event, or even a teen ager charity bazaar.

In order to have the carbonated water for your sodas you can use any of the following ideas: Large bottles of club soda will do the trick. After you open a bottle in order not to let the carbonated gas escape, either replace the cap or use a rubber bottle stopper. Or you can use bottles of seltzer in which you squirt the carbonated water into a glass by pressing down on a lever. And finally you can even make your own carbonated water by using a special bottle which comes with CO-2 small containers.

Now for the syrups: You can use either fresh fruit juices, canned juices from fruits, or frozen juices. We squeezed fresh oranges and made delicious orange sodas. We also did the same with fresh limes. And we found good results with canned and frozen orange juices. We bought canned loganberries and used the juice and some of the berries as our syrup. Yummmmm, it was delicious! Then we tried frozen strawberries and raspberries which we first defrosted. Wonderful results. We tried making pineapple sodas using the juice from canned pineapples and also the plain canned juice. But our best results came from buying a can of crushed pineapple.

You will find by experimenting the best ratio of juice and syrups to use in proportion to the carbonated water. We found that a ratio of one to five gave us good results. If you want to make some unusual drinks then try these two: "Grape-Squizz" — this one we made by using one third grapejuice and two thirds ginger ale. "Cream-Squizz" — this one we made by using one fourth sweet cream and three fourths ginger ale.

Ice cubes came from our refrigerator. In order to have an advance supply, you can empty the trays and keep cubes next to freezer unit. All of these drinks should be served cold. If your syrups and your carbonated water are kept in the refrigerator, then you can do without the ice cubes if you use up your materials quickly.

If you want to make ice cream sodas, you can either use brick ice cream or loose ice cream with a dispenser. It sort of gives a professional air by using the loose ice cream though equal results can be obtained either way. If you want to top the soda with whipped cream the easiest way to do so is to use the new type squirt cans which shoot out a stream of whipped cream. The CO-2 inside the can does the trick.

If you want to make sundaes, the easiest way is to use canned fruits or fruits which are in season. With a can of mixed fruits or cocktail fruits, you can make a simple tutti-frutti-sundae. Slice a peach into sections and place around a scoop of ice cream. Or use half peaches that are canned. Top with whip cream and a cherry.

A little imagination and experimentation will produce new sundaes. And you can invent names for these creations. We carefully removed a section of a banana, took out the inside and thus we had left the shell. This we filled with crushed walnuts and vanilla ice cream and topped with slices of banana. The name? "Big Banana Split." Another one we invented was a great success. We bought canned tangerine sections which we arranged neatly in a round deep dish. Filled with strawberry ice cream. And topped with frozen melon balls and whipped cream.

You are going to have lots of fun with your soda bar. But one word of warning: Don't be surprised if the adult members of your family give you a lot of business!

AIR PRESSURE TRICKS

A smart magician has a variety of tricks for people of different age levels. The trick that may go over very big with 9-12 year olds, may be a fizzle with 17-20 year olds. Now here are three very simple tricks you can do for your younger nephew or niece. Of course, this makes you feel "old." All of these three tricks are based upon the action of air pressure.

The first is known as "The Obedient Hard Boiled Egg Trick." We assume your audience consists of four little boys and girls. Into the kitchen you go. Of course, mother has given you permission to use the things you need. You take a dozen eggs in a box and look carefully at them. Point at any egg and remark:

"That is an obedient egg. It will listen carefully and do what I say."

Remove this egg from the box. Then fill a sauce pan with water and place egg into it. Boil until you get a hard boiled egg. Then remove with a spoon. Let cold water run over egg. Next you carefully remove the shell. You need a clean glass milk bottle with a narrow neck. You rest the peeled hard boiled egg on top of the bottle.

"When I tell this egg to jump into the bottle, it will obey me," you inform your little audience.

You lift egg from the top of the bottle. You light a match and drop it inside the bottle. The inside must be dry and not wet. Then quickly replace the egg. Now give the order.

"Obedient Egg, Jump into the inside of the bottle!"

What will happen? The Egg will obey. It will force itself right down into the bottle. Why? Because the match while burning has consumed oxygen. Hence the air pressure outside is stronger than the air pressure inside the bottle. It will thus force the egg into the bottle. Will they be surprised! Now for your next trick.

The second is known as "The Obedient Can Trick." For this you need a large can in which varnish or paint is sold. It has a small metal cap that can be screwed on or off the neck of the can. It is best to go to your hardware man, your grocer, or the paint man. Ask him to get you a can that is completely clean in the inside. This is a safety precaution. Remove all paper from the outside.

Now you take the can and fill it with an inch of water on the bottom. Place the can on the gas range. Then a small flame on the burner beneath.

"This is an Obedient Can," you tell your small audience. "When I give the signal, he will smash himself."

You watch the steam coming out from the top. When it is almost all out, you turn out the flame. Now wear a heavy glove and replace the cap tightly. Then to your audience, you say:

"All of us go back and we watch the can obey."

And surely enough, soon the can will punish itself and crumble in the sides! Why? Because the steam forced out most of the air from the inside of the can. Hence the air pressure outside is stronger than the air pressure inside the can. It will thus force in the sides of the can. Will they be surprised! Now for your last trick.

The last trick is the Obedient Card. You fill a glass of water to the top. Take a thick card that fits over the brim of the glass. Point at it and say:

"This card is the Obedient Card. It will remain on top even when I turn the glass of water upside down."

Do this trick over the kitchen sink. Press down evenly on the card. Then turn the glass of water upside down in your hand. The card is there and not a drop of water comes out. Then turn back the glass. They will be all surprised. How did it work? The air pressure outside held the card against the water. No more tricks for today. You are "tired."

TENNIS TIPS

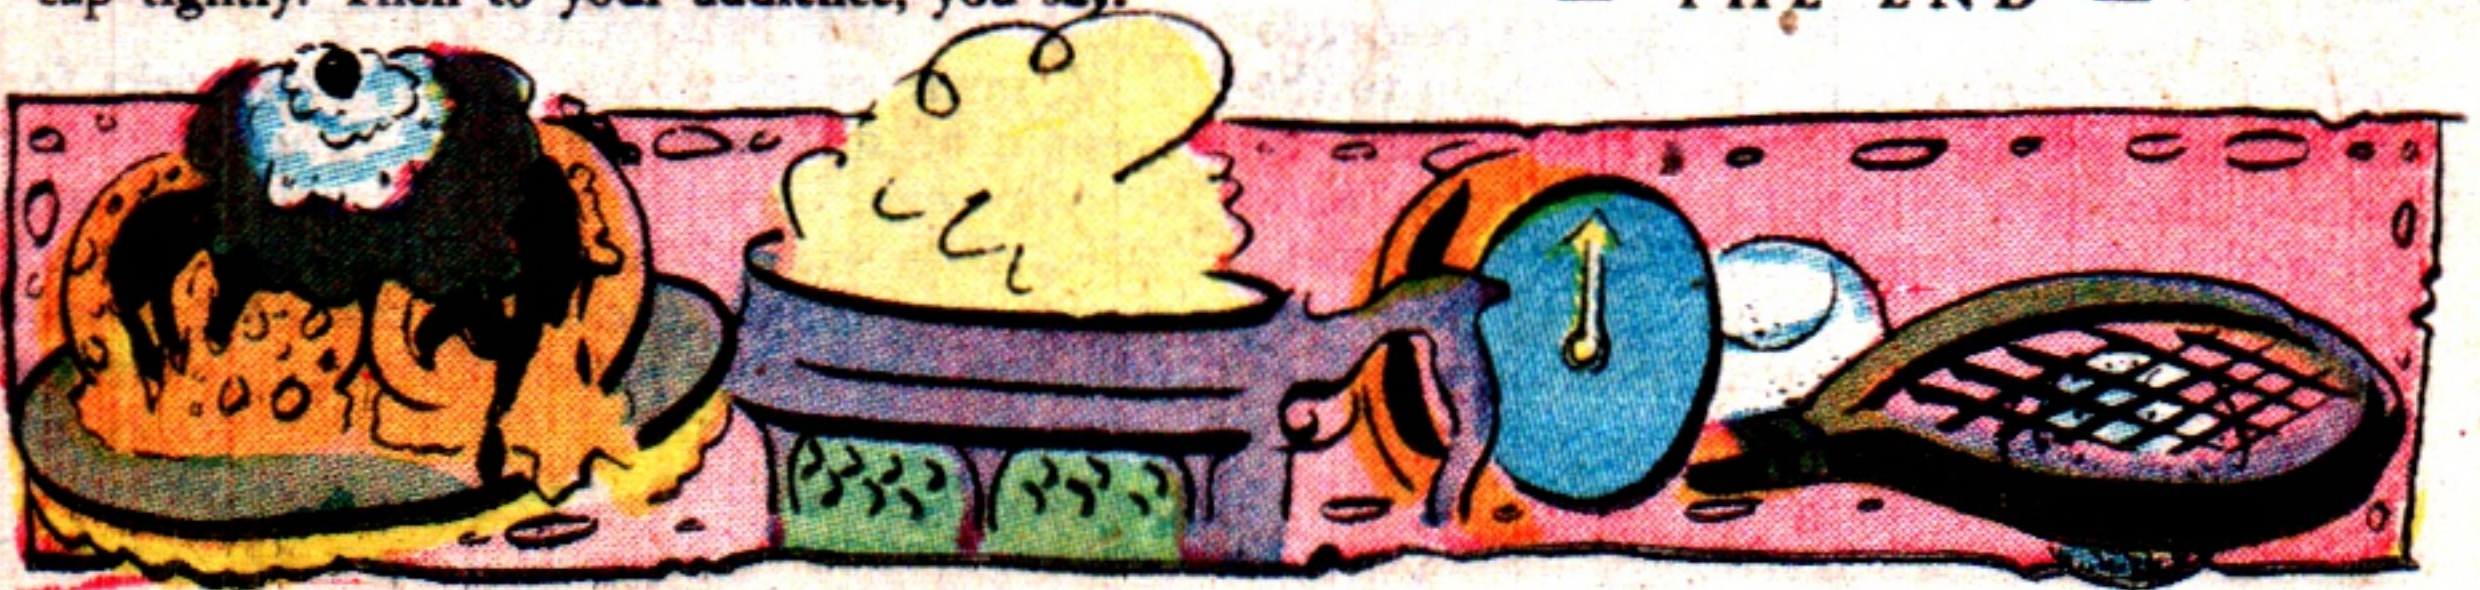

In order to become a good tennis player you must constantly practice. If you haven't a partner, you can do your practice against a brick wall. Draw a line with a piece of chalk so that you get the illusion of the top of the net. Then mark off several spots on the wall.

You are going to aim for these spots. Both in your forehand and in your backhand. After you find you can get very close to these spots, remove them. Imagine they are there and aim again. You want to develop the ability to get the ball to go where you want it to go. This is something like "aiming" but you have to be fast.

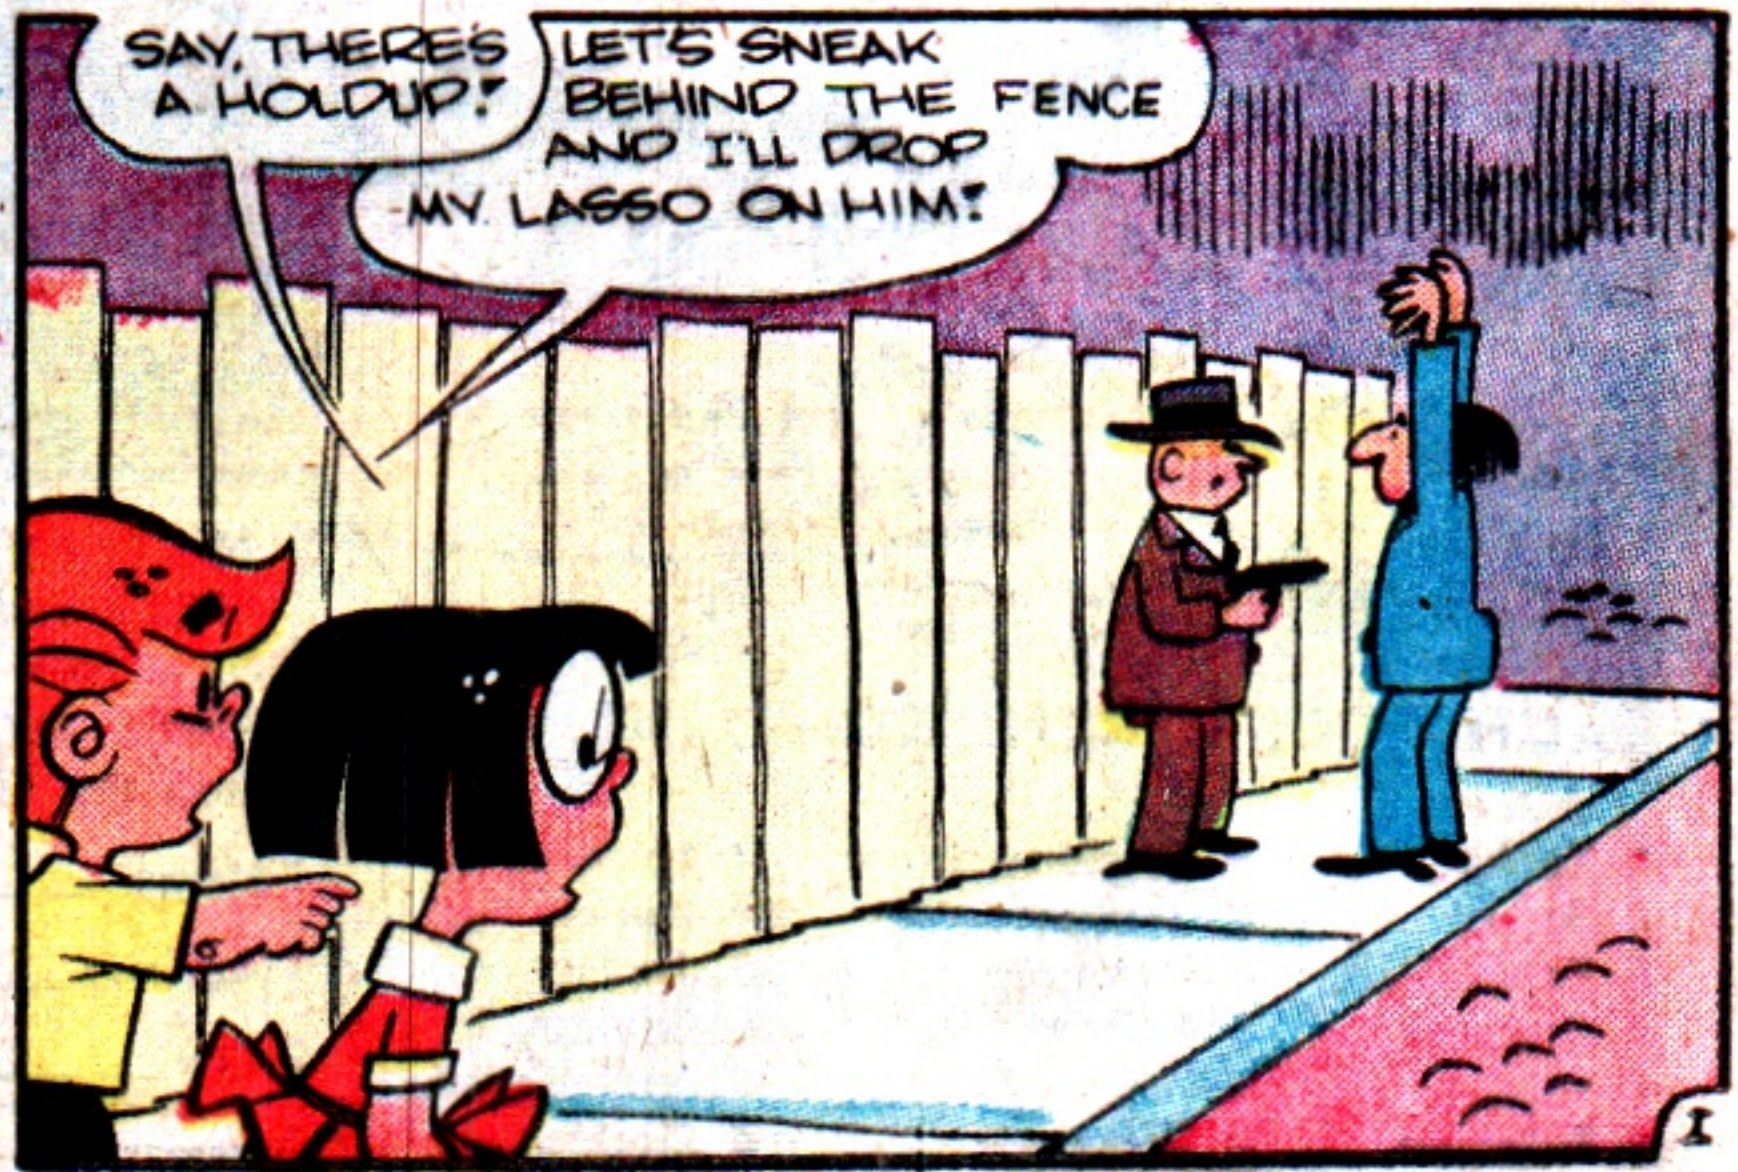

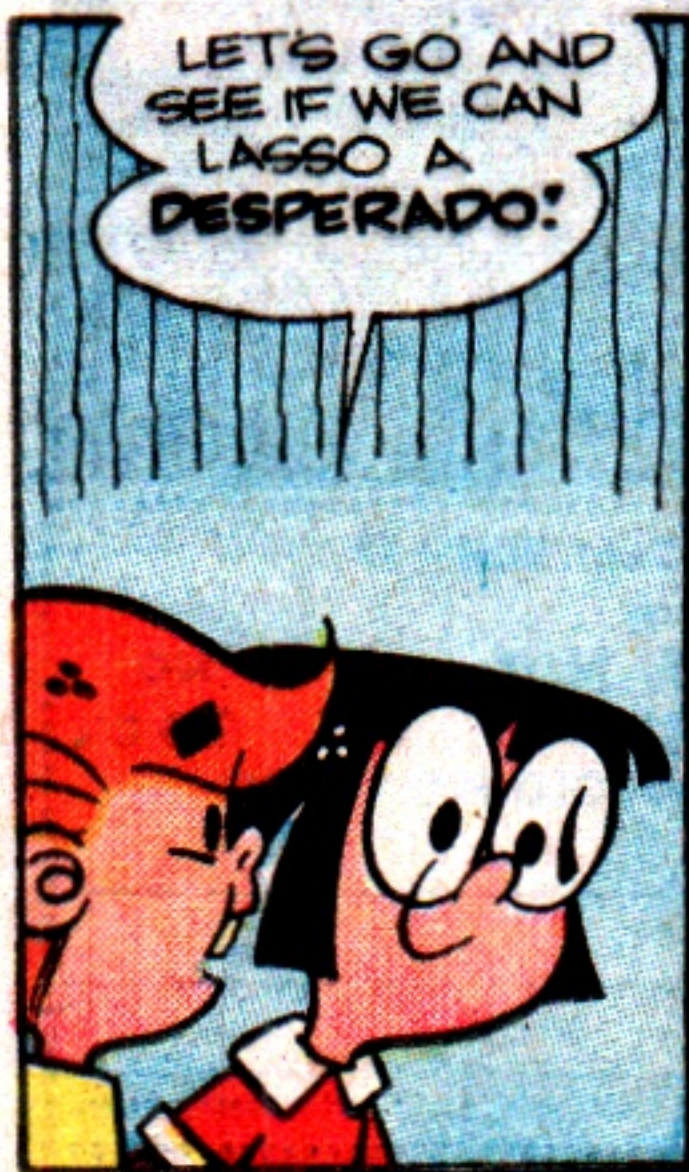

Watch the grip on your handle. Don't let your tennis racquet slip while you are doing this. Your hand should feel comfortable and yet be firm. You must be the master of that racquet. So do this practice at least two or three times a week.

If you have a family garage, ask Dad if you can use the side of that wall. Or you may use the yard in your school. If there is a handball court near, this would be excellent.
